Winnebago Tribal Council Swear-In Ceremony 2026-2027

WINNEBAGO, Neb. – It was a momentous morning at the Whirling Thunder Wellness Center gym on Wednesday, October 7, 2026, as community members gathered both in person and virtually on the Winnebago Tribe's YouTube livestream to witness the 2026 Winnebago Tribal Council Swearing-In Ceremony. The ceremony followed the General Election on Tuesday, October 6, in which tribal members cast ballots to fill three vacant seats on the nine-member governing body. Six candidates were listed on the ballot, including two incumbents.

The finalized election results brought back two familiar faces and introduced one new voice to the council table. Eugene DeCora, Sr. secured the most votes, leading the ballot with 285 votes to retain his incumbent position. Craig Cleveland, Sr. emerged as the council's newest member, securing 219 votes. Keely Bassette-Purscell locked in the final seat with 217 votes, retaining her incumbent position as well. Rounding out the ballot were candidates Damon Payer with 185 votes, Darla LaPointe with 143 votes, and Brian Chamberlain with 116 votes. The morning opened with a welcome by Quince Bass, Big Voice Radio Station Manager, offering a brief run of show from the agenda. Winnebago New Breed

Singers rendered traditional Winnebago's Welcome and Flag songs, followed by Winnebago Veterans Anthony Bassette, Kevin Ebert, and Alfred Lopez posting of the colors. Before moving to official business, Winnebago Tribal Elder and Combat Veteran Larry Payer offered the blessing and prayer, praying for guidance, mutual respect, and wisdom for the incoming council table. He also shared a reflection on the translation of the flag song, stating, "there goes our flag. Today, our flag is at war. Stand up for it, protect it." Following the prayer, Judge Zendejas

Winnebago Community Wears Orange in Remembrance and Solidarity

WINNEBAGO, Neb. — The Winnebago Tribe of Nebraska observed Orange Shirt Day, Every Child Matters, and the Day of Remembrance for Indian Boarding Schools on September 30. Across Winnebago, tribal members, employees, and Winnebago Public School students wore orange to honor boarding school survivors, remember the children who never returned home, and recognize the lasting impacts on Native families and communities. Orange Shirt Day began with the story of Phyllis Webstad, whose new orange shirt was taken from her when she arrived at a residential school in Canada at six years old. Her experience inspired a movement centered on the message "Every Child Matters," affirming every child's right to safety, love, and belonging. September 30 also serves as a day of remembrance in the United States for those affected by Indian boarding schools. WTN Tribal Council members Keely Purscell and Emmy Scott hosted an educational presentation for students and staff about the observance and its significance. The presentation provided an opportunity to learn, reflect, and connect the act of wearing orange with the history it represents. The Big Voice Radio staff also visited tribal departments and entities to interview community members about what Orange Shirt Day means to them. These conversations brought local voices into the observance, creating space for adults and youth to share their perspectives on remembrance, healing, and the importance of supporting Native children. To further encourage community learning, The Big Voice released a special episode of WOIPERES, its Ho-Chunk history series, focused on the observance. Together, the presentation, interviews, and episode offered ways for community members to engage with this history beyond wearing an orange shirt. Con't. on page 2...

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Throughout Winnebago, the sea of orange carried a shared message: our children are valued, our survivors are honored, and those who never came home are remembered. Carrying that message forward means continuing to listen, learn, and nurture a future in which our children can grow up knowing who they are and feeling proud of where they come from.

proceeded forward with the Oath of Office. One by one, hands raised, Eugene DeCora, Sr., Craig Cleveland, Sr., and Keely Bassette-Purscell swore to support and defend the Constitutions of both the United States and the Winnebago Tribe of Nebraska. The table immediately moved into nominations to the election of Officers. The council voted to reappoint sitting Chairman Coly Brown, Trey Blackhawk as the table's Vice-Chairman; re-elected councilman Eugene DeCora Sr. as the Winnebago Tribal Council Treasurer; and Secretary Teresa Littlegeorge continues her role as Winnebago Tribal Council Secretary. Judge Zendejas called the newly appointed Officers to take a secondary oath for their officer duties.

The newly elected and re-elected council members shared heartfelt words with the tribal membership, sharing lighthearted personal jokes, gratitude to their families, keeping open lines of communication, looking out for the youth and elders, and maintaining unity even when the table doesn't completely agree. The Winnebago Tribal Council then took its first official action during the ceremony as they reviewed and passed Resolution 27-05, officially approving the adoption ballot of tribal applicants from the previous evening with a unanimous 8-0-0 vote.

To close out the event, Winnebago Veterans and New Breed Singers rendered the retreat of the flags. With the formal business finished, the ceremony adjourned, and everyone was invited to take pictures with the new council.

Question of the Issue:

What’s your favorite Halloween memory?

Bethani Redhorn
Winnebago Indian News Editor

My favorite Halloween memory is from 2021. I took my kids to the Skinny Bones pumpkin patch for the day, and they were able to wear their costumes around. They received all kinds of candy and sweet treats, but we still ventured out that evening to trick-or-treat. After that, we ended our night at the haunted hallway inside Briar Cliff University

Kevin Ebert
Multi-Media Coordinator

My favorite Halloween memory has to be from when we were kids. I was probably 10 or 12, and my little brother was around 8 or 10. We were getting dressed for Halloween, and he decided to be a cowboy—complete with a loaded BB pistol.
My mom saw it and said, “No, you’re not taking that!” He said, “Yeah, I am! Last year those big kids took my candy. They ain’t gonna take it again!”
That’s probably one of my favorite Halloween memories. My little brother was serious about protecting his candy! RIP Roland, chum Ebert.

My favorite Halloween memory has to be.. Spending 2023 Halloween night with my Sis Ky and Nani Sue. I’ll cherish those memories with them forever!

My favorite Halloween Memory? I think this is the same question from last years issue. I shared mine at that time.
However, I'll go with a favorite Halloween costume growing up. I remember having a maid costume one year and my daughter (hocak) Keely, did my hair and make-up. I remember going to some older guys house and he asked if I was a "Mom," not sure what he meant by that but thought it was creepy in hindsight.

My favorite memory was trick-or-treating every year, mainly in the 90s and early 00s. Back then, people in our community really got into it and sometimes, we would even be trick-or-treating until around midnight! I remember my legs just aching afterward, but we’d have these huge bags of candy that would last us a few weeks. I loved the houses that would give out full-sized candy bars, popcorn balls, and frybread, haha.

For most of my adult life—ever since I was 18 years old—Halloween has been less of a holiday and more of a military-grade tactical operation.
If you asked me what my favorite spooky memory was over the past three decades, I used to have a standard answer. For years, the mission was simple: maximize candy output. My goal was always to fill as many bags as humanly possible, leaving no neighborhood un-plundered. We would load up, hit the high-yield streets over in Sioux City, and then hustle back to Winnebago to finish up the night strong. It was about volume, hustle, and sugar-fueled triumph.
But life moves fast, and traditions evolve.
I’ve lived in my house on Thunderway for 18 years now, and in all that time, I’ve never actually handed out candy. Not once. While the older kids were growing up, the tradition was always about being out on the pavement.
That brings us to right now, and the answer to this week's question has completely flipped the script. My favorite memory of Halloween in my lifetime? It hasn't even happened yet.
This year, for the very first time, we are staying home. My youngest daughter is 12 years old now, and she's my baby. When we talked about what she wanted to do for Halloween this year, she didn't want to hit the road for a massive candy haul—she wanted to stay right here and hand candy out to the kids in our neighborhood.
So, that is exactly what we are doing.
We are turning our place on Thunderway into a full-scale haunted destination. We're going all out decorating the house as scary as we can make it so the neighborhood kids have a great spot to stop by.
After 35 years of being on the prowl for candy, hanging up my trick-or-treating shoes to sit on the porch with my youngest daughter is going to be the best Halloween memory of my life. Sometimes, the best traditions are the ones you haven't even made yet.
What is your favorite Halloween memory, or what are you planning for your porch this year? Let us know in the comments below!

Community Voices Meet Candidates at Tribal Election Forum

WINNEBAGO, Neb. — Tribal members had an opportunity to engage directly with candidates for the Winnebago Tribal Council during the General Election Forum held October 5, 2026, at Little Priest Tribal College’s Elk Auditorium.
Hosted by LPTC’s NATV2510 Contemporary Native American Issues class, the forum brought community members and candidates together ahead of the October 6 General Election. The event was free and open to the public, with a program scheduled from 5 to 7 p.m.
The gathering gave tribal members a chance to hear directly from those seeking to represent them and engage in conversations about the community’s future. Opportunities like this help voters get to know candidates beyond campaign materials and consider the leadership they want for their nation.
For the students hosting the forum, the event connected classroom learning with participation in tribal civic life. Bringing candidates and community members together made space for the kinds of discussions that shape decisions within Native nations.

Tribal Council leadership carries responsibilities that affect families, programs, and future generations. Direct engagement between candidates and the people they hope to serve can support informed voting and strengthen expectations for communication and accountability.
The forum also highlighted the role of a tribal college as a place for community dialogue. By hosting a public gathering before Election Day, the Contemporary Native American Issues class helped create an opportunity for tribal members to take part in conversations about their government.
The evening underscored a responsibility shared by candidates and voters: listening to one another and staying engaged in the work of the nation. That work continues beyond Election Day, through the voices, questions, and participation of the people.

Rooted in Gratitude: Wahaḡi Wōšқа Brings Community Together

WINNEBAGO, Neb. — The Winnebago community gathered October 1, 2026, at the Whirling Thunder Wellness Center for Wahaḡi Wōšқа, the Harvest Celebration and Green Corn Dance, giving thanks for the season’s gifts and celebrating the traditions that connect Hōçaḡ people across generations.
The harvest is a time to thank the Creator for the foods that sustain the people. Corn, beans and squash carry generations of knowledge about planting, tending and caring for the land. Through the Green Corn Dance and Bean Dance, gratitude takes shape in songs and steps passed down by those who came before us. Celebrating ancestral foods also renews connections to the land and its seasonal rhythms.
The evening’s program included a community meal and Grand Entry. Craig Cleveland Jr. served as master of ceremonies, VJ Wolf Leader as arena director, Florence Lonetree as headwoman and Jaxon Bearskin as headman, with New Breed as host drum.

Sr. Miss Harvest Eliana Blackhawk and Jr. Miss Harvest Payton Miller were featured alongside their specials, a “Little Girls” Dance Special, and honorariums for dancers and drums.
MiTena St. Cyr’s family sponsored a Thank You Tiny Tot Special for boys and girls ages 0–6, giving the youngest dancers a moment to shine and celebrating their place in the community’s living traditions.
Winnebago Public School staff member Andrew Halsey was also honored for being named Nebraska State Social Studies Teacher of the Year, celebrating his accomplishment among the community he serves.
For young people, these gatherings create opportunities to learn alongside family and elders, hear the songs, and discover the meaning behind traditions. For everyone who sings, dances, prepares food or brings their family, participation is a way of caring for the community and its future.
At the Wahaḡi Wōšқа, gratitude comes alive through song and dance. Each song carried forward and every child welcomed into the circle strengthens the connection between generations.

Homecoming celebrates our students and the people who stand behind them. Thank you, Winnebago, for showing up, sharing the excitement and making memories together. Go Big Blue!

Blackhawk Center AQI Light and How to Read It

By Kurt Lyons – EPD Air Quality

Since August 2025, a glowing sphere on a tower above the Blackhawk Center has been telling Winnebago what the air is doing — from the parking lot, the road, and much of the village after dark. It is the Tribe’s Air Quality Index (AQI) Light.

The AQI Light was invented here. It takes two familiar ideas — the U.S. EPA’s AQI flag program, which uses colored flags to show air quality, and Sioux City’s Weather Ball, which changes color so people can read a condition at-a-glance. This sphere reports current air quality, not the weather forecast. Inside the 3-foot globe, LED lights change color with the Air Quality Index. Green and yellow are everyday air. Orange and above are the days to pay attention — especially for children, elders, people with asthma or heart and lung conditions, and anyone working or practicing outdoors. The light runs on the Tribe’s own PM2.5 sensor network. Those monitors report to AirNow.gov. Each hour the AQI Light reads that hour’s data from the network and updates the color of the sphere to match. What you see on the globe is the same air the sensors just measured, not a forecast and not someone else’s city. The AQI Light operates 24 hours a day, seven days a week — daylight and after dark.

What the colors mean
Color	AQI category	What to do
Green	Good	Air quality is satisfactory. It is a good day to be active outside.
Yellow	Moderate	Air is acceptable. Unusually sensitive people should take it easier outdoors.
Orange	Unhealthy for Sensitive Groups	Older adults, children and teens, people with certain health conditions, and people active outdoors should take it easier.
Red	Unhealthy	Everyone should take it easier. Shorten outdoor time and choose lighter activity.
Purple	Very Unhealthy	Health alert. Sensitive groups should avoid outdoor exertion. Everyone else should avoid long or intense outdoor activity.
Maroon	Hazardous	Emergency conditions. Stay indoors when you can. Close windows and limit outdoor time.

On orange and red days, coughing or shortness of breath are signs to ease off. Air pollution can worsen asthma and trigger attacks. Simple steps help: take breaks, walk instead of run, reschedule hard outdoor work, and close windows so outdoor air stays outside. Email alerts for organizations When the AQI reaches Orange or Red, EPD Air Quality sends warning emails to local authorities so schools, emergency management, health programs, and other partners know conditions have changed. If your organization wants to be added to that list, contact Kurt Lyons at EPD. Phone: (402) 263-8502, ext. 2003 Email: kurt.lyons@winnebagotribe.com Phone app A companion smartphone app is still in development. The app itself is built; release to the Apple App Store and Google Play is waiting on final account access through Tribal IT so the developer can publish it for iPhone and Android. Until that step is finished, the sphere at Blackhawk Center is the public signal. AirNow.gov and the Tribe’s Air Quality page remain available for anyone who wants the numbers behind the color. Look up when you pass the Blackhawk Center. If the globe is green, enjoy the day outside. If it has shifted to orange or red, take it easier — and pass the word.
